What is Counselling?

Sometimes in life we can find things stressful or difficult to cope with and Counselling is one way to help you to work through your worries, problems, thoughts and/or emotions.

During your Counselling session you'll be encouraged to talk about your worries and emotions in a safe and confidential space with a trained Counsellor. They can help you gain a better understanding of your emotions, circumstances and thought processes and will support you to find your own strategies and solutions, to help you to move forward, cope and recover.

Your Counsellor will accept, listen and respect what you share. They will not judge, patronise or tell you what they think you should do, but they will support you through your counselling journey, so that you feel able to make the decisions and choices that you feel are right for you.

What types of things can Counselling help with?

- ⇒ Anxiety
- ⇒ Depression
- ⇒ Bullying

and anything else worrying you!

How often will I see my Counsellor?

Counselling sessions will last a hour (50 minutes) and are usually on the same day and at the same time each week.

You will see the same Counsellor on a regular basis for six weeks, a few more sessions can be discussed if needed.

What kind of Counselling could I have?

- Face to Face Counselling
- Telephone
- Teams

Will anybody else know about my Counselling?

No, not if you don't want them to know. Your session arrangements and what you discuss with your Counsellor is confidential. This means that your Counsellor will not tell other people what you talk about.

The only time this would change is if your Counsellor is seriously concerned for your safety or the safety of another person. However, your Counsellor would always aim to talk to you about this first and you will talk more about confidentiality in your first session.

If you are under 13 you will need your parent/ carer consent to attend your own one to one counselling session.
